Liberal Candidate Challenges MP to 'Stand Up for Langley'

Liberal candidate Bill Brooks is challenging the sitting MP for Langley to come clean on his accomplishments for this community.

“Mark Warawa has floated grandiose promises, but has failed to deliver anything of substance in his 19 months as a Langley politician,” said Brooks. “Warawa can complain all he wants that he can't deliver solutions for the issues facing this community because he's a member of the Opposition. Well, regardless of who the government is, a strong representative for Langley can get things done.”

Brooks has been a strong community champion for Langley over the past six years. He has an extensive record of public accomplishments – all done as a volunteer. Some examples:

- Bill was instrumental in bringing the City of Langley, TransLink, the Province of BC and the Government of Canada together to secure funding for the 204th Street Overpass.
- He personally went to Ottawa to advocate for $2 million toward the McLeod Athletic Park Grandstand construction so the Township of Langley could secure the 2010 BC Summer Games.
- Brooks is working with the Langley Meadows Community Association to secure federal funding for the heritage preservation of Matheson House.
- He continues to work on bringing necessary Langley water and sewer system improvements to the attention of the federal government.

Brooks says he is running for office because Langley needs a strong representative in Ottawa. “Langley needs someone who understands community needs and is prepared to champion those needs in Ottawa and get results,” he added.

“As a former Abbotsford City Councillor, Mr. Warawa should know what it takes to be a strong advocate for his community. Unfortunately, Langley hasn't seen this from its sitting MP.”
